Biodynamics, Earth Healing and Goethean Movement: Sensing and Fostering Health Robert (Karp) Karbelnikoff

In this workshop I will share several strands of research and work I am actively engaged in with colleagues related to biodynamics.

The morning session will introduce an approach to bringing the benefits of the biodynamic preparations to larger, non-agricultural landscapes that I have been developing in partnership with the Viroqua Earth Healing Group. This work is informed by the experience that, used in the right way, the biodynamic preparations can also bring healing to larger ecosystems such as forests, rivers, mountains, and bioregions, as well as to the living organism of the climate. This work opens up new perspectives on how the BD preparations work and how one might accomplish RS's hope that they be applied to large land areas of the earth. In the afternoon, I will introduce a form of movement-based research that can enhance our ability to sense etheric forces and support the health of the elemental world. We will also explore the potential for these movements to be applied as a methodology for sensing the "qualities" and "quality" of the biodynamic preparations.
This form of movement, sometimes called Goethean movement, has been developed by Hugh Ratcliffe, a biodynamic vegetable grower and Goethean scientist living in France, with whom I have been studying for several years.

All of the above will be grounded in a deep understanding of the challenges and needs of the elemen-tal beings in our time and their call to the heart of every human being, to awaken to our true potential as co-creators of the natural world.
